General Grant's Condition Still Remains Unchanged.

McCullough's Hopeless Condition. New York, July 15.—Captain W. M. Connor, of the St. James hotel, goes every day or two to the Bloomingdale asylum to see John McCullough. He has arrangements made so that he hears every day, by telephone of the actor's condition. He said yesterday: the actor's condition. He said yesterday:
"Poor Mac has everything that is necessary

he would be anywhere. He talks once in a meet; then they take him out in the garden and walk him around, and he forgets all about it. The physicians say it is only a Execution of Josiah Palmer, Bern-er's Accomplice, in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, July 15,-The execution of Josiah Palmer (colored) this morning is the last that can take place in this county under the present law, which designates the Ohio penitentiary as the place for all future executions. Palmer's crime was the murder of Wm. H. Kirk, in his stable, on the afternoon of December 24, 1883. The object of the crime was robbery. Wm. Berner and Palmer, both of whom had been employed by Kirk, planned and executed the murder. They were almost immediately arrested, and both confessed, each charging the other with having struck the fatal blow. It was the verdict in Berner's case of manslanghter that was the chief institute cause of the friest that was the chief institute cause of the friest. that was the chief inciting cause of the friot in which the Court House was burned in in which the Court House was burned in March, 1884. #### DREAMS AND SIGNS.

Beecher Does Not Believe In Joseph's Vision of Jesus. "I have stolen like a thief, and I have murdered men without a qualm of conscience—in my dreams," said Henry Ward Beecher during his prayer-meeting talk last night. "Yet when I have been awake I have carried my sense of honesty so far that I have even gone back and corrected the mistakes of tradesmen when they have given me too much change. Some persons place great stress on a dream. They take its fanciful pictures for signs. What is a dream? It is samply when one part of the brain wakes up and goes to work while the other part oontinues sleeping. That is why dreams usually come so near the morning, and it also explains the contradictory character of the dream as compared with the usual train of thought and disposition of the dreamer. In reality dreams don't amount to anything. They come neither from God nor the devil. Their origin is in a disordered stomach."

"Joseph's dream concerning the infant. THE RUSSIAN ADVANCE

"Joseph's dream concerning the infant. Christ."

"I doubt the fact." promptly replied the Plymouth pastor. "To my mind such forms of prophecy are very nebulous."

"What do you think of John Bunyan's dream?" asked a timid man.

"I think he dreamed it while wide awake," answered Mr. Beecher.

The Plymouth pastor was talking about the power of superstition and the importance that many persons place upon signs. Superstition, he said, was a very important element in human life. Combined with a certain degree of moral sense superstition had been the cause of all religious despotism. Some persons had a morbid dread of having thirteen persons sit down to a table together to eat, lest one of the persons should die. What possible connection could there be between the number thirteen and any supernatural influence? It was true that one of the thirteen might eat or drink something that did not agree with him and die, but such occurrences was frequent at dinners where there were not thirteen diners. It was an old tradition that if you spilled salt you would be sure to have a quarrel. Just as though quarreling had to be salted. There are many estimable ladies who shrink from wearing opals because an opal is an unlucky stene. Mr. Beecher knew of a lady who sold some very fine opals for a mere song because, as she explained, she had been unlucky ever since she was married. She haid her bad luck to the opals, although there were probably tens of thousands of unlucky married woman who never hadany opals.

The moonstone was a sign of good luck.

unlucky married woman who never had any opals.

The moonstone was a sign of good luck. A Boston man bought a fine moonstone and gave it to his daughter. A year afterward he called upon the jeweler who sold him the stone and said that he wanted another one just like it. "I gave that moonstone to my daughter." he said, "and she got married. Now I want a moonstone for my other daughter, so that she will get married." Mr. Beecher said that one of the signs that he observed when a boy was never to creep under the bars to get into an orchard, but always climb over them. He nevrr saw a set of bars now that he did not feel like climbing over them.

set of bars now that he did not feel like climbing over them.

Alluding to signs and dreams spoken of in the Bible, Mr. Beecher said he thought they would bear careful winnowing. Much of the language of the holy book was figurative, and should be considered in the light of the prevailing customs and notions of the people of biblical times. For instance, Christ is quoted in the Bible as saying, "As wise as a serpent and as harmless as a dove." "This statement should not be taken literally, said Mr. Beecher, "for we know positively that a serpent is not wise. A serpositively that a serpent is not wise. A serpent has no wisdom at all."—New York Times.

A FAITHFUL DOG.

An Incident of the Recent Indian Outbreak in Arizona.

Mr. R. M. Weyms, the mining expert, says the Denver News, relates the following story of an Indian raid which took place in Arizona during the late Indian troubles in the Territory, of which he was an eye witness: "During this outbreak of the Indians the settlers in the neighborhood of the White Mountains suffered considerably from the frequent ravages of the White Mountain Indians. Murder and arson were prevalent, and immi-grants were ruthlessly massacred. While these scenes of horror were being enacted one of a still more gloomy character was being carried out at Fort Apache. At sunrise on a pleasant Sabbath morning the red devils made the hour hideous with their yells and discharge of musketry. Inspired by a transient rise in their courage, they rode within 200 yards of the fort and kept up an incessant fire from their guns, doing, however, no serious damage. They then rode off in the direction of Seven-mile Hill, where some Mormons were chopping wood for the government. Here the work of murder was actively taken up. The fight that ensued must have been a fearful and stubborn one, as nearly 150 cartridge shells were found by the side of one of the Mormons named Patterson; two hundred yards from Patterson was found another dead man, a Mormon also, and between the dead bodies was a well-beaten trail made by a dog that had belonged to Patterson. The faithful animal had kept watch over the two bodies, fighting away the coyotes and other animals for nineteen days without food or water. When found by the packtrain which went to bury the bodies, the dog was in such a weak condition that he had to be lashed on a mule and carried to the fort, where his forlorn condition enlisted the sympathies of Mrs. General Carr, who gave him the best attention. He soon became the pet of the regiment, the Sixth Cavalry, and retained his place until the company was ordered out of Arizona, when he lost his kind mistress and was transferred to the care of Messrs. Stewart & Norton, post traders at New Fort Grant, where he can be seen at all times standing guard over the butcher

As a general rule, the first symptom "But, Mr. Beecher," interposed one of his flock, "what do you think of the dreams spoken of in the Bible?"
